Antiken på 2000-talet - hur?

Passa på att få en inblick i hur Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek arbetar med att modernisera sina utställningar genom ett pågående forskningssamarbete med Aarhus universitet!

Julie Lejsgaard Christensen from Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek will present to us her PhD project Antiquity in the 21st Century - How?.

The project will look at how antiquity and the Glyptotek's collection of antiquities could be updated and presented in a way that is relevant to today's museum visitors. The project will investigate the narratives engendered by recent antiquity research that are not traditionally presented to visitors in museums' antiquity exhibitions. This will be linked to a user perspective.

The museum's users will be involved in the qualification of more multifaceted, relevant narratives about antiquity. Finally, the project will help develop captivating concepts for public outreach and engagement, also qualified on the basis of a user perspective. The project is part of the Glyptotek's work on an upcoming, entirely new presentation of its collections of antiquities.

Julie Lejsgaard Christensen is Head of Interpretation at Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek in Copenhagen and a PhD student at the Department of History and Classical Studies at Aarhus University.
